Colonial Candle Makers

- 1 The first settlers in the early colonies were very independent. They had to make or grow everything they needed. There was no electricity or modern lighting, so candles were very important items.
- 2 A person who made candles in colonial times was called a chandler. The chandler made candles out of animal fat. First, the chandler had to boil the fat in large vats. The fat was then poured into narrow molds and allowed to cool. Candle making must have been difficult work.
